There are two main groups of bats:

The megabats are large, fruit-eating bats.

The microbats are small, insect-eating bats.

Most bats are nocturnal.

Bat wings are made of leathery skin over bone.

Bats are flying mammals.

Some bats hibernate and some migrate.

Insect-eating bats use echolocation.

Fruit-eating bats rely on sight to fly. They find food by using sight and smell.

Bats live in dark places.
